

UCO Chambers Library Website and Article Databases

When searching for library resources, go to the library's home page at "library.uco.edu." Central Search is our new, single-search option for finding articles, books, media and more. Central Search can search through most of Chambers Library's databases, as well as the catalog of library-owned materials. But additional databases are available for many subjects. To select and search them individually, click Articles/Databases in the menu bar at the top of the page.

This page lists all of the databases to which the library subscribes. Most offer articles from collections of journals covering different subjects. But some provide encyclopedic entries, e-books, and audiovisual materials. The titles of some make it apparent what types of information they contain, but with others it's not always clear.

Clicking the information icon next to the title, will open a popup window with details on what each one encompasses.

Academic Search Complete is a large, multidisciplinary database that includes some literature on almost any subject. But use the Libguides to find the best subject-specific databases for a particular area of study. Each guide provides information on recommended databases and a wealth of other research tips.

For more assistance, contact the reference librarians at Chambers Library.