

This handout gives the basic examples of the Turabian and Chicago Manuals of Style for a works cited list for many papers in the Humanities and History fields. Turabian has few minor differences from the Chicago Manual of Style and is intended as a simplified substitute. Your professors may have specific guidelines for how to format your paper; this guide is a general overview. For complete information, consult the following resources:

Turabian, Kate L. A Manual for Writers of Term Papers, Theses, and Dissertations, 6th ed. Chicago: The University of Chicago Press, 1996.

Hacker, Diana. A Pocket Style Manual. 4th ed. Boston: Bedford Books, 2004. (This source has an accompanying website at <http://dianahacker.com/pocket/>.)

References in the text of your paper (See pages 116 - 164 in the manual)

Turabian Style requires that you identify the precise location of a reference in the text of your paper, most often utilizing footnotes or endnotes for all types of sources. Notes cite the authority of statements, provide cross-references, supply acknowledgements, and elaborate on the discussion in a way that will not interrupt the flow of the paper. Notes are easy to add in Microsoft Word using the Insert function.

List of works cited at the end of the paper (See pages 165 - 174 in the manual)

Rarely does the bibliography list everything that has been written on a given topic. Therefore centered heading titles can include "Selected Bibliography," "Works Cited," or "Sources Consulted." Each page should be numbered, continuing the pagination of the text with subsequent source entries beginning at the left margin. If a citation exceeds one line, each succeeding line of the source should be indented one - half inch or five (5) spaces. Double space the entire list between entries, but not within entries. The easiest way to create the works cited is alphabetical by the author's last name. However, you can assemble the list according to source type (primary, published primary, secondary, etc.), then alphabetical by author within each category. If no author is provided, start with the title. In titles, capitalize the first, last, and all principal words. Italicize titles, but not the period following the title.

Citation System (See pages 185-213 in the manual)

Note: ¹ Author, Title (Place of publication: Publisher, year of publication), page numbers. (In the Turabian Style, the note numbers are superscript; regular numbers followed by a period and a space are preferred in Chicago. Consult your professor on their preferred style.)

Bibliography: Author. Title. Place of publication: Publisher, year of publication.

The following examples are based on the 6th edition of the Manual for Writers Term Papers, Theses, and Dissertations and from the University of California Berkeley Library handout.

The Turabian Style provides for in-text citations similar to the MLA style, but many instructors prefer footnotes or endnotes.

Articles in a newspaper: For newspaper articles, a page number is not necessary. A section letter or number is sufficient. However, supplying a page number is strongly encouraged.
¹ Kenneth Chang, "The Melting (Freezing) of Antarctica," New York Times , 2 April 2002, F1.	News items from daily newspapers are rarely listed in the bibliography unless the newspaper is referred to several times. The more common entries are the following: New York Times . April - May 2002. New York Times . 2001-2002.

Electronic Publications

Citations for Internet publications are ever changing as websites and URL's evolve. The Turabian Manual, 6th ed., has very little examples for citing online information. We have already looked at how to cite articles accessed online. Notes for books are the same. The key is to include as much information as possible.
